People want stuff made in America, then when the result of that is super high prices compared to slave wage made goods they freak out. Even though a sweatshirt made in China without a living wage or unions would be about twenty-bucks less. You can either have an empire that outsources manufacturing with dirt cheap prices, or no empire and paying top dollar for merch. Or, you could actually critique capitalism properly, which is that if you get rid of it the ability to buy endless versions of the same thing will not be possible. But then again, both sides rely on capitalism in some way. Republicans want stuff made in America, then Democrats do so but the price tag is higher because people actually get paid closer to a living wage in America and then they freak out that only the rich can afford it. Of course, only the rich can afford it, because only the rich are paid a living wage, and much more obviously.
